A Confession

By John Doe

A Confession

26th June 1875

Under the title of "I, a Confession," a magisterial document is set forth in the press, which may serve as a guide to others. The introduction to this tale, which is as follows:

"I, a Confession," a title which is to be considered as a warning to all who are disposed to act on the principles of materialism. It is however, not the intention of this writer to convey the impression that the principles of materialism are in any respect unfounded. On the contrary, it is the wish of the writer to state that the principles of materialism are the only principles which can be founded on a true and proper idea of the nature of the universe.

A Confession

28th June 1875

I, a Confession, am a materialist. I believe in the doctrine of evolution, and I believe in the law of the survival of the fittest. I believe in the doctrine of the descent of man, and I believe in the doctrine of the identity of mind and matter. I believe in the doctrine of the unity of the universe, and I believe in the doctrine of the uniformity of the laws of nature.
